SOCK INC. AND ROBINDALE FARM Celebrate One Year Anniversary

By Taylor Renner/Phelps Media Group

In November 2016, Sock Inc. and Robindale Farm teamed up to bring unparalleled equestrian services to Waxhaw, NC. This fall, Steve Heinecke, head trainer and owner of Sock Inc., and Carolyn Rechkemmer, owner of Robindale Farm, are thrilled to reflect on the growth and success their partnership has achieved in just one year.

Combining the top-notch Robindale Farm facility and full-service amenities with Heinecke's professional insight into the industry and knowledgeable, proven training methods has resulted in a winning recipe for Sock Inc.'s clients and horses. While the Sock Inc. family has grown immensely over the year with its re-location to Robindale Farm, new clients and horses are always welcomed.

Heinecke caters to hunter, jumper and equitation riders of all ages and experience levels in his personalized training program, where clients and horses receive unmatched individualized attention. Whether your aim is to qualify for indoor finals or compete in your very first horse show, Heinecke is dedicated to helping his clients achieve their goals.

"When Steve got ahold of my daughter, Cailey, earlier this year she was about to give up on riding," said Sock Inc. client Amy Duguid. "He really turned it all around. Cailey has moved up two divisions in six months and is not just pinning, but winning, championships in very competitive divisions. Steve is a fantastic teacher and a great horseman!"

Both Heinecke and Rechkemmer's love of horses, and the sport, is evident in their keen understanding, management skills and attention to detail above all else, offering the community an environment where horses and riders can thrive, learn and have fun in a safe and comfortable setting.

Sock Inc. and Robindale Farm invite you to schedule your first lesson with Heinecke or a tour of the farm with Rechkemmer today. See page 39 for contact information!
